

National Severe Weather Warning Service

CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment

The lighter precipitation and faster clearance, among other things, has stopped temperatures falling quite as much, and reduced the likelihood of wintry weather; this was always a marginal situation, with a very low likelihood assigned.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 07:00 on Thu, 18th Feb 2016 until 08:00 on Thu, 18th Feb 2016

A combination of causes has led to a much less wintry mix than might have otherwise been the case, so the warning is now canceled.
